BOTANICAL GARDEN MARIMURTRA - CURIOSITIES - ORNAMENTAL FLORA

Strolling through Mediterranean plants of the world

...on the scenic viewpoint over the Costa Brava

If there is a garden that reveals the history of Catalonia's passion for plants it is, without doubt, the Botanical Garden Marimurtra. A walk through the chimera created by a sensible German resident, now open to the public and possibly the most attractive botanical place. Walking along narrow winding paths that were designed almost a century ago, where plants from the world's Mediterranean climates reveal curiosities that make them unique, we are transported easily to all continents of the planet.

Many of the plants tell us histories about our temperate climate, about singularities they have suffered over time and also about their traditional and ancient purposes both at their places of origin and here in Catalonia.

This Garden is, above all, a place for those who love traditionally styled gardens with symbolic species and well-conserved features, with the added luxury of being one of the best viewpoints over the southern Costa Brava: a walk to enjoy the most representative panoramic views of the Mediterranean coast.

An experience for those who love botanical curiosities, flowers of classic ornamental Mediterranean plants and landscapes related to nature and gardening.
